For the littlest scientists, the whole wide world can be a laboratory for learning. Nurture their natural curiosity with this treasury of 89 hands-on science activities specifically designed for children ages 3 to 7.

The activities are grouped into seven stimulating topic areas: the senses, weather, physical science, critters, water and water mixtures, seeds, and nature walks.

Because the activities have been field-tested by more than a thousand teachers over 10 years, you’ll find this collection unusually easy to use in a variety of settings, including elementary schools, preK programs, Head Start, and day care. In addition to clear background and a master materials list, you get step-by-step procedures and comments and questions to pose to children.

Nearly all activities include a reproducible Family Science Connection—in both English and Spanish—to send home so the whole family can share a great learning experience.

William C. Ritz, professor emeritus of science education at California State University, Long Beach (CSULB), has been involved in science teaching and science teacher education all his professional life.

Author of more than 20 publications in science education, he has directed a number of funded projects at CSULB, including the Young Scholar’s Ocean Science Institute, the Project to Improve Methods Courses in Elementary Science, Project MOST: Minority Opportunities in Science Teaching, and A Head Start on Science.
