PROGRAM NOTES & TEXT

Symphonic Fanfare. Symphonic Fanfare is an exuberant concert opener. An expansive and lyrical middle section contrasts with the majestic and energetic outer sections. The piece was composed and orchestrated in the spring of 2005, and received its premiere performance by the Wheaton Municipal Band on July 21, 2005 with the composer conducting.

—Mark Camphouse
Sheltering Sky unfolds in a sweeping arch structure, with cascading phrases that elide effortlessly. The introduction presents softly articulated harmonies stacking through a surrounding placidity. From there emerge statements of each of the two folksong-like melodies—the call as a sighing descent in solo oboe, and its answer as a hopeful rising line in trumpet. Though the composer’s trademark virtuosity is absent, his harmonic language remains. Mackey avoids traditional triadic sonorities almost exclusively, instead choosing more indistinct chords with diatonic extensions (particularly seventh and ninth chords) that facilitate the hazy sonic world that the piece inhabits. Near cadences, chromatic dissonances fill the narrow spaces in these harmonies, creating an even greater pull toward wistful nostalgia. Each new phrase begins over the resolution of the previous one, creating a sense of motion that never completely stops. The melodies themselves unfold and eventually dissipate until at last the serene introductory material returns—the opening chords finally coming to rest.

—Jake Wallace

Illyrian Dances This suite of three dances was commissioned by the British Association of Symphonic Bands and Wind Ensembles with funds provided by West Midlands Arts dedicated to Timothy Reynish. The first performance took place on 26th September 1986 at Warwick University during the fifth annual BASBWE conference, conducted by the composer.

Viola: What country, friends, is this?
Captain: This is Illyria, lady.
(Shakespeare—Twelfth Night I)

The precise geographical location of Illyria was not important to Shakespeare. What excited him was the resonance of the word itself and the romance of all far away, make-believe places. Illyria is Never Never Land and the idea of inventing dances for such a place intrigued him.

Guy Woolfenden writes, “As Head of Music to the Royal Shakespeare Company, I have composed more than one hundred and fifty scores and as with ‘Gallimaufry,’ some of the thematic material for the Illyrian Dances is adapted from music originally written for RSC productions.”

Komm, süßer Tod

Komm, süßer Tod, komm sel’ge Ruh'
Komm und führe mich in Friede,
weil ich der Welt bin müde.

Ach, komm, ich wart’ auf dich,
komm bald und führe mich,
drück’ mir die Augen zu.

Komm, sel’ge Ruh?

Come, sweeter death; come, blessed rest!
Come and lead me to peace,
for I of the world am weary.
Ah, come, I wait for you,
come soon and lead me,
close my eyes up.

Come, blessed rest!

Variations on a Korean Folk Song While serving in Seoul, Korea as a member of the Eighth United States Army Band, John Barnes Chance encountered Arirang, a traditional folk song sung by native Koreans when experiencing circumstances of national crisis. The Korean word “arirang” literally means “rolling hills,” and the song relates the story of a man who is forced to leave his significant other, despite her persistent pleas to accompany him. Chance overheard Arirang while riding a public bus in Korea and later incorporated it into his work, Variations on a Korean Folk Song.

Variations on a Korean Folk Song is comprised of a theme and five distinct variations. Though the theme is of Eastern origin, Chance maintains a traditional Western tonal function based on triadic harmony and a pentatonic melody. Formal techniques used in the piece are canon, inversion, imitation, augmentation, ostinato, and polymeter. Chance maintains the theme’s Eastern influence by featuring distinct percussive instruments like gongs, temple blocks, cymbals, timpani, vibraphone, and triangle. In 1966, Variations on a Korean Folk Song was awarded the American Bandmaster’s Association’s Ostwald Composition Award and the piece remains a standard of band repertoire today.

Saisei Fanfare was composed to commemorate the first concert of the newly appointed conductor Donald McKinney with the Louisiana State University Wind Ensemble. McKinney became the Director of Bands following the retirement of Frank Wickes, who is an icon in the wind band field. The work celebrates a new era and heralds the continuation of one of the nation’s leading programs. Saisei is Japanese for “rebirth.”

—Eugene Corporon
Sanctuary was composed for conductor H. Robert Reynolds as a symbol of our enduring friendship. The work was commissioned in his honor, and received its premiere performance by the band he conducted for 26 years. As a personal tribute to Mr. Reynolds, who was a horn player in his earlier days, I chose the solo horn to be the work’s main musical messenger. The opening prologue grows out of a set of pitches that were derived from the letters of his first name (Harrah), an idea I first used fifteen years ago in Postcard (commissioned by Reynolds in memory of his mother.) Vivid college memories of Mr. Reynolds conducting Grainger’s Hill Song No. 2 and Colonial Song—both well-known favorites of his—were also in the back of my mind, as the sounds that I created in some ways echo the lyrical mood of these pieces.

The word, sanctuary, conjures a rich array of images. It can imply a place of solitude, comfort, rest, prayer, protection. It can suggest a place that is strong and imposing or one that is very small and private. I believe all of those images are suggested at one point or another in the music. The opening bell sounds suggest peace and joyful reverence. The main horn melody is at once reflective and reassuring. There is also an underlying hint of nostalgia—a wistfulness, perhaps suggested by the simple three-chord progression which threads the entire work. But there is also an expression of strength and power in the work’s dark and imposing climax.

After the climax recedes, the main melody disappears for a period of time, replaced by flute and clarinet solo episodes which create repose, space, and distance. But in the end, the three-chord harmony returns and serves as a doorway for the final appearance of the main horn theme. The work ends with a quiet echo of the opening bells. Sanctuary was commissioned by the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association in honor of H. Robert Reynolds. The premiere performance was given by the University of Michigan Symphony Band, Michael Haithcock, conductor, at Hill Auditorium on October 22, 2005.

Symphony AD 78 was written for the Arthur Doyle (hence AD) Concert Band in 1978 and performed in Birmingham in December of that year. A powerful work, it lay dormant until resurrected by the conductor Geoffrey Brand who has recorded the work, available on CD. An opening fanfare-like Maestoso leads directly to an Allegro risoluto, which exudes determination and forthrightness. The second movement follows without a break and is a continuous plaint in which the melody seems to forever seek resolution like a troubled soul searching for respite. Only in the closing bars does peace seem to take over. The final movement, marked Allegro non troppo, starts with a cheering fanfare that leads to a bright and breezy romp, with a rustic feel about it. When the fanfare reappears we are suddenly immersed in exaltations of joy that really give a feeling of optimism as we proceed to the end of the piece via a short Coda.

Heroes Lost and Fallen—A Vietnam Memorial was commissioned and premiered in 1989 by Victor Bordo and the Ann Arbor, Michigan, Symphony Band, winning the prestigious Barlow Composition Contest in 1990. This poignant work intersperses a haunting chorale with The Star Spangled Banner, March to the Front (the Vietnamese National Anthem), Where Have All The Flowers Gone, and Taps (Butterfield’s Lullaby), depicting the constant struggle of good and evil.

The composer offers the following poem:

Banish our thoughts
From this grueling war.
Let Suffering and Death
Rule no more.

Resolve this conflict
In hears so sullen,
And bring eternal peace
To the heroes, lost and fallen.

Dance of the Jesters is a prime example of Tchaikovsky’s keen sense of musical nationalism. Originally composed as incidental music for the ballet The Snow Maidens, this dance captures the color and zest of Russian folk dance music. The ballet is about the Snow Maiden, the daughter of Father Frost, who falls in forbidden love with a human, Misgir, who is already betrothed to Coupava. The Snow Maiden follows him southward with plans to interrupt his wedding, but tragically melts under the rays of the southern sun. The flurry, energetic drive, and playful melodies associated with Tchaikovsky’s ballet scores are all heard in this rare and invigorating music. This edition is derived from an arrangement from the ballet originally transcribed for Russian military band.
