Part II: Utterances and notes

Please study the following notes by yourself. Make sure that you understand everything. If you have any questions, please send an email message to your instructor.

About the sentences in this unit

- 'yǒu' means 'to have'. 'méiyǒu' means 'do not have'

- 'ma' is a question marker. 'Nǐ yǒu méimei ma?' means 'Do you have sister(s)?'

- A question can also be formed by repeating the verb and inserting 'měi' or 'bù'. For example:

  Nǐ yǒu méimei ma?
  Nǐ yǒu méiyǒu méimei?

  These two questions mean the same thing, but are in different forms. You can use them alternatively. 'Bù' negates 'shì' (to be) as in 'bú shì' (am not, are not, is not), while 'měi' negates 'yǒu' as in 'méiyǒu' (do not have).

- 'Nǐ jiéhūn le méiyǒu?' and 'Nǐ jiéhūn le ma?' are same questions in different forms.

- 'yě' means 'too, also, either' 'Wǒ yě méiyǒu méimei.' means 'I don't have sister, either.' Pay particular attention to the position of 'yě': it is right before 'méiyǒu', not at the end of the sentence.

- 'yī ge' means 'one', 'líng ge' means 'two'. 'gé' is a measure word in Chinese. 'gé' can be used for persons and many other items.

- Learn the numbers:

  yī  líng  sān  si  wǔ
  one  two  three  four  five

Please note:

Chinese is a discourse oriented language. There may be more than one clauses in one long 'sentence'. You don't have to repeat the same subject in later clauses.

Tā jiéhūn le, yǒu tàitai, yǒu érzi, méiyǒu nǚér.
He is married, has a wife, has a son, doesn't have a daughter.
